

WELCOME

What does eating and drinking mean?

Eating and drinking brings us together. It connects us to family, friends, colleagues and even new people. Eating and drinking stimulates our senses. It's emotional!

New tastes to experience and old flavours that bring back memories.

Tradition encourages innovation.

We hope you enjoy your time with us!

THE DIFFERENT COOKING LEVELS

You can distinguish between six cooking levels:

Our Standard

Blue rare (franz. bleu)

This cooking level is used only rarely, but nevertheless belongs in a complete listing. The meat is only briefly and lightly seared, so that it is slightly grey on the outside and raw on the inside, the core temperature is approx. 38 °C.

Raw (franz. bleu | cru)

The meat is seared well, but is still almost raw inside. The crust is thin and brown. It yields strongly under pressure and the escaping meat juice is red. The core temperature is a maximum of 45 °C.

Rare (franz. saignant)

The meat is still slightly bloody on the inside, pink on the outside. The crust is crispy and brown - the meat lukewarm. The maximum core temperature is 45-55 °C.

Medium (franz. à point, anglaise)

At this cooking stage, the meat is pink throughout. It yields under pressure. As in the previous cooking stage, the crust is crispy and brown. The core temperature is approx. between 55 °C and 58 °C. It is therefore not served hot!

Medium-well (franz. demi-anglais)

Only the core is still slightly pink, as well as the meat juice. The core temperature is between 59 °C and 64 °C. Serving temperature is appropriate for the bite!!

Well done (franz. bien cuit)

At this stage, the meat is cooked completely through and no longer yields under pressure. The core temperature is over 65 °C.
